overview 2020

“A small group of conscious, committed people can change the world.”

The Transformative Meditation Programs recognise meditation as a powerful agent for change. They offer a clear and supported pathway that begins with learning and practicing a range of meditation styles for personal growth and ends the year with training in the skills of teaching meditation in the community or workplace.

They provide a process that is transformative individually, offers connection to like-minded groups and can lead to training to work in the world.

The methods we use will vitalise your meditation, help you to connect with the spirit in all things and access your inner world of energy and creative potential. The combined energy of a transformative meditation group can help to shape the forces evolving consciousness in the world.

What makes these programs unique?

It offers a balance of training and experience in developing deep stillness that leads to the exploration of higher states of consciousness along with practical techniques for safely and ethically teaching others. Each level deepens into a range of tested and proven methods for supporting transformation in individuals, communities and the world.

We study a range of tested and proven methods for supporting transformation in individuals, communities and the world. This includes training that includes a range of meditations for personal development, learning and understanding the benefits and limitations of meditation and opportunities to present meditations and facilitate groups under supervision.

The Facilitator's Certificate and Diploma courses also offers deep practice at a live-in retreat and class training that includes the principles of adult learning, communication skills, active listening, leadership and OH&S as it relates to meditation. There is an optional mentoring and supervision program for people who are teaching meditation.

There are very few, if any, Diploma level training courses in teaching meditation. The diploma course offers a balanced progression through three levels: two certificates and a diploma. It takes you from learning to meditate to understanding the applications of meditation to the issues of the modern world; its benefits and limitations. The program is also unique in offering a weekend live-in meditation retreat and specialised training for working with specific special-needs populations that you are very likely to encounter in your teaching.

The programs are designed to build upon one another and are offered in the following structures:

Mentoring and Supervision Meditation Project

This 1-year Diploma program (or 6 months if you follow the mid-year intensive timetable) begins in the first as a course for personal development and the development of meditation skills. It has been brought into the modern world from ancient systems that have proven their effectiveness for thousands of years. It includes the scientific perspective on why these techniques are so effective and how to immerse yourself deeply in them, so that they become an important part of who you are. You are then able to teach these techniques to others from a truthful and congruent place.

In the second half of the year you can deepen your practice with membership of an ongoing group that meets once a month to explore expanded levels of consciousness.

Further, there is clinical mentoring and supervision, special techniques for working with busy corporate and family people, children and their parents and people who are dealing with health issues. All along you will be consciously moving through your own meditation journey and the spiritual, growth and healing benefits it offers.
